COMMENT OF THE DAY

Future Of Trieste

THE agreement signed in London between Britain, the United States and Italy to give the Italians more administrative powers in Trieste's Zone A is the natural culmination of discussions extending over past months. The agreement, by itself, does not solve the so-called Trieste problem, but it does go a considerable way towards putting the Italians in Zone A on something approaching equal footing with the Yugoslavs who have assumed full administrative rights in Zone B. Marshal Tito declares that he will not recognise the three-power agreement; it is a negative gesture which possesses no effective substance, Yugoslavia cannot be held blameless for the failure to date to resolve the Trieste problem. Her own attitude has been uncompromising and adamant. She has rejected all of the Anglo-American suggestions for an amicable and satisfactory settlement, insisting that her claims are paramount. In the final analysis, as it has for some time been recognised, the issue must be settled between Italy and Yugoslavia, and now that Italy has been given a proper status, Yugoslavia, notwithstanding Marshal Tito's first reaction to the newly-created situation, may deem it advisable to seek a practical and permanent solution to the future of Trieste by holding direct discussions with the Italians.

Unworthy "Scoop"

WHETHER it be genuine or false, publication of the alleged secret report by Admiral Fechteler at this time is about the worst disservice the French newspaper Le Monde could do to the Western Allied cause. For the paper to argue that for the most part the report merely sums up a variety of opinions expressed by military strategists and politicians in the past does not alter the fact that publication at this moment is mischievously tactless. The newspaper's action appears to be deliberately calculated to widen the breach in opinion between Washington and London on the question of supreme naval command of NATO naval forces in the Mediterranean. This is a ticklish dispute but one which clearly can be settled without rancour providing discussions are kept within the proper orbit. A report such as that attributed to Admiral Fechteler, even if fabricated, is capable of arousing new suspicions and rendering more difficult the composing of opinion relating to NATO policies. All that Le Monde has done in publishing what is almost certainly a fictitious report, is to provide the enemies of the Western Powers with new propaganda ammunition.

HK Trade Unions

YESTERDAY'S uproar at the anniversary celebrations of the Hongkong and Kowloon Chinese Telephone Workers' Union is a further example of the intensified struggle which has been going on for some time for power within the Colony's trade unions. The situation was almost inevitable. Politics, rather than members' interests, have been a predominant concern in many of the unions. It is not surprising that the more level-headed trade unionists are becoming weary of their organisations being used as political forums. The crying need of many local trade unions is for members to find leaders who put members' interests first and political leanings last. When this has been accomplished the unions will function as they should and they will automatically gain the status which is rightfully theirs.

TANKS AIDED RELEASE OF GENERAL DODD

The Lucky Coffin

Ostend, May 11. A hospital patient here, told he had only a few days to live, bought himself a magnificent coffin lined with white silk. Then he surprised himself and his doctors by making a remarkable recovery.

He sold the coffin to another seemingly hopeless case — 65-year-old Jacques Smets. Within a few days Jacques had recovered from severe internal haemorrhage.

He sold it to a third, desperately ill patient. He, too, is now on the way to full recovery, and today he was looking for a buyer for the lucky coffin.—Reuter.

35 Killed When Stand Collapses

Buenos Aires, May 11. Thirty-five people were killed last night when a brick wall being used as an improvised grandstand collapsed on top of them as they watched a boxing match at Bell Ville, 250 miles northeast of here.

At least 20 were reported in serious condition today. Hospitals at Bell Ville are jammed with injured and with anxious relatives.

The wall was 25 yards long and five yards high.

The disaster occurred in an open space enclosed by two seven-yard walls where weekend dances and sports competitions were held.

Last night the enclosure was roofed off by canvas to protect the 1,000 spectators from a storm after the contest started. The canvas, heavy with accumulated water, pulled in one of the walls, trapping 150 people.

Police and the local fire brigade worked among the rubble until dawn, releasing the dead and injured.

Soon after reports of the accident reached Buenos Aires, Senora Eva Peron's Foundation sent a caravan with doctors, nurses and medicines, which reached here early today.—Reuter.

Honeymooners Missing

Sydney, May 11. A man and his wife were reported missing on a honeymoon flight today between Indonesia and Port Darwin aboard a private aircraft.

The pilot of the plane is Captain Martin Cherry of Sydney who served with the Royal Australian Air Force during the war and since worked as a test pilot and ferry pilot.

He married an English girl last month, and was bringing his bride to Sydney in the aircraft.

Aircraft are now searching for the missing plane near Port Darwin where the aircraft was reported three hours overdue.—France-Press.

Bus Crashes Over Embankment

Trial Shots Had Due Effect On Reds

CORRESPONDENT'S STORY OF POW CAMP SCENES

Seoul, May 11.

Brigadier-General Francis Dodd was released by his Communist captors on Saturday after flame-throwing tanks were lined up in front of Compound 76 and unleashed several trial bursts of searing fire, the United Press was told today.

According to the informant, the Eighth Army Commander, General James A. Van Fleet, told the rebellious Communist prisoners that they must release Gen. Dodd alone and unharmed "or we are coming in to get him."

The flame-throwing tanks fired but did not harm any of the prisoners who seized Gen. Dodd on Wednesday, and held him captive for three days.

On Sunday, Gen. Dodd was en route to Japan for conferences with high Army officers, including the Far East Commander, General Mark W. Clark. Gen. Dodd had conferred with Gen. Van Fleet in Seoul.

Gen. Dodd had been scheduled to talk to the press on Sunday, but after several postponements, the Eighth Army announced that no public statements will be made by the General until the current investigation is completed.

Army officers indicated that the press conference now is postponed "temporarily."

The United Press informant said after the flame-throwing tanks sent several trial bursts of fire in the full view of 6,000 Reds in Compound 76, the North Koreans offered to make an agreement in writing. Gen. Van Fleet then repeated the order to release Gen. Dodd.

The tanks were lined up abreast in front of the compound but their number was not disclosed. The informant said Gen. Dodd's capture was apparently the result of a well-worked-out plan.

Communist leaders had requested a conference, Gen. Dodd and two colonels entered the compound. (Official Army statements thus far indicated that only one colonel was with Gen. Dodd when the Communists pounced. He was Lieutenant Colonel W. Raven.)

The informant said that the prisoners gradually separated Gen. Dodd from his two companions, then pounced on him and dragged him into one of the blocks. The Army refused either to confirm or deny statements of the United Press informant.

NEWSMAN'S STORY

But the informant was substantially confirmed by the only American correspondent who managed to go to the island. Sanford L. Zalberg, correspondent for the International News Service, said in a pooled dispatch that the "Army on Saturday massed at least 20 medium tanks and the threat of using them had an effect in freeing Gen. Dodd at 9:30 on Saturday night."

Excerpts from Zalberg's dispatch added, "I visited Koje Island for eight hours on Saturday morning. Evidently I arrived on the morning of 'D-Day'—Dodd Day. I was kept under guard during my stay. The Army said Gen. Dodd was unharmed. Early on Saturday tanks arrived on ship at Koje Island. I counted 20 Patton and Sherman tanks in heavy rain down the muddy road en route to Compound 76, where more than 6,000 fanatic North Korean prisoners of war kept Gen. Dodd in custody."

"Though the Army kept guard over me I was able to talk to men and officers. They said Gen. Dodd was well-treated."

"An infantry officer who was on duty in front of Compound 76 enclosure for three days after Gen. Dodd's captivity, said he watched the Communists on Friday transfer Gen. Dodd from one tent to another. He said he could see Gen. Dodd plainly. Gen. Dodd was about 100 yards away and surrounded by a great mass of Communists. None of the Reds laid hand on Gen. Dodd. The officer said, 'We intend to give them one more chance to surrender the General today. If they don't we are moving in.'"

FRIGHTENED

The lieutenant said on Saturday for the first time since Gen. Dodd was taken hostage, his captors seemed frightened by the gravity of their action. He said, "They knew we are moving in. They were scared."

There was not any more singing, shouting or fooling around as there had been in previous days when they thought they had the upper hand. The officer said that Communist POWs on Koje Island were bold and unafraid of the American guards. The guards must treat the prisoners with a gloved hand.

On Koje Island there were many versions of how Gen. Dodd was captured.

Many soldiers said they thought Gen. Dodd was a fine general. Few soldiers on Koje do know what the Communists were demanding.

One officer said the Communists "keep making demands sort of like at Panmunjom."

Other soldiers said they understood that the Communists concerned chiefly with the Allied interrogation of POWs. Zalberg said "The Army was greatly upset by my arrival on Koje Island on 'D-Day'. They took away my correspondent's accreditation card temporarily but returned it. I travelled to Chinha on the south coast of Korea via an authorized air force courier. At Chinha I tried to find a military transport to Koje but none was available. A fisherman took me across to Koje-do in a 20-foot boat. The trip took four hours through rain-swept seas. We landed at a village."

ARMED PATROLS

"Jeeps with armed military police went up and down the coastal road. There were armed patrols at intervals. It would have been impossible to walk around undetected. I walked into a native police station and told them to call the American military police. Members of an MP company duly arrived and took me along. They were courteous but kept a sharp watch. I reported to Lt. Col. Alanson T. Leland, provost marshal. While waiting in his office I watched the Pattons passing by. I counted 20 and more came by."

"First Lieutenant William D. Hall, public information officer, told me that the commander was irritated with me. I told Lt. Hall the tremendous human interest impact of the story. I requested an interview with the new commanding officer at Koje-do, Brigadier-General Charles F. Colson."

"Lt. Hall asked for my correspondent's accreditation and I gave it to him. Lt. Hall then took my request for an interview to the general. Gen. Colson turned it down. I was then ordered to leave the island. I asked Lt. Hall to return my card. Lt. Hall said he was sorry but he could not under instructions. I protested. Lt. Hall said the card would be returned to me at Pusan. It was returned to me."

TIGHT SECURITY

"During my short stay on Koje-do, I saw how tight was the security there. One could not have walked 100 feet without soldiers or military police picking you up for questioning."

"The South Korean police working with the Americans seemed to be efficient too. Koje Island's compound was heavily guarded with two high towers surrounding each plot."

"At night lights blaze down in the corners of the compound are three-story high houses where machineguns are mounted."

"On Koje Island, there are 138,000 refugees from North Korea. In fact, one settlement is named Hungnam port, from which the United States Navy evacuated many Koreans during the United Nations retreat from North Korea."

"Tough diehard Communists are held on Koje. Non-Communist prisoners of war who said they did not want to go back home were moved from Koje. Eighty thousand hardcore Communists remain."—United Press.

Japan Wants Trade Ban Relaxed

Tokyo, May 12.

Kyodo, quoting authoritative government sources, said Japan intends to negotiate with the United States for relaxation of the present restrictions on trade with Communist nations.

The negotiations, the same circles said, will be started regardless of developments in the Korean truce talks.

These quarters declined to reveal the full extent of the planned relaxation but indicated that textiles, machinery, paints, dyes and some other items may be removed from the list of banned goods.

The contemplated relaxation will be strictly in keeping with the provisions of the Battle Act of the United States or embargoes enforced by Western nations.

Government sources said the Japanese list of banned export goods while under the occupation is broader than that fixed by the Battle Act.

Trade circles in Tokyo believe Communist China is contemplating revising its policy to expand trade volume with the Western bloc countries, including Japan.—Associated Press.

It utilizes the mercury isotope 198, produced by the bombardment of gold with neutrons in the interior of the atomic pile at Britain's atomic research station, Harwell. WILD AFFRAY IN ESSEN

Essen, May 11.

Police gunfire killed one youth and gravely wounded two others today in a wild affray touched off by an outlawed demonstration of 30,000 Communist youths against West German peace contracts with the Big Three.

The authorities said demonstrators started shooting and firing at the police, who were struggling against heavy odds to break up the banned rally.

One policeman was injured seriously in the head and several others suffered lesser injuries at the hands of the mob.

Phillip Mueller, 21, of Munich, was shot through the chest during the brawl and died a little later in Essen City Hospital.

Albert Breckhauser, 24, of Kassel, was shot in the back and Bernard Schwarze, officer worker from Muenster, was shot through the knees. Both are in hospital.

RALLY FORBIDDEN

The police said they believed Mueller, Breckhauser and Schwarze were members of the Communist "Free German Youth", an organisation outlawed in West Germany after the Court had ruled that its aims and purposes violated the constitution.

The rally in Essen, heavily bombed Ruhr industrial city, was billed as a mass meeting of "the young generation". The police forbade it after reporting indications that it was shaping up as a Communist demonstration against the "contractual agreement between the Allied and West Germans now being concluded in Bonn."

Youths gathered here from all over the Ruhr and the Rhineland for the mass protest. Ignoring the police ban on the meeting, they streamed in by hired buses.

The authorities undertook to block the main highways into Essen, but the visitors filtered through or around the roadblocks by the thousands and gathered in the heart of the city. The chief assembly area was the downtown Garden Exhibition.

The police hurried to the area and several times broke up gathering knots of demonstrators before they could merge.—United Press.

Kiel, May 11.

About 50 tons of German wartime ammunition, salvaged from the bottom of the Baltic Sea, blew up this afternoon after a fire broke out in an ammunition dump in Jaegerdorf, about 15 miles from Kiel, on the shores of Kiel Bay.

Three separate big explosions rocked the entire area, and the blast waves were felt strongly five miles away. The rumbling of the explosions was heard in Kiel.

Many smaller explosions followed the main bursts, which turned the area of the dump to a moonlike crater field. Window panes and lamps were shattered in the surrounding villages. Nobody was injured.

RAISED BY DIVERS

Huge black and grey clouds hung over the area for several hours. No estimate of the damage was available.

The ammunition, dumped into the Baltic Sea by the British at the end of the war, was raised by German divers for scrapping. The dump was owned by the State Government of Schleswig-Holstein.

Police believed that in the last of the three big explosions, the strongest of all, two British wartime sea mines that had been salvaged went off.

The origin of the fire was not yet determined. Government explosives experts believed powder had seeped out of some naval artillery shells and started burning through spontaneous combustion.

Police and explosives experts could not investigate tonight because live shells were still hurled about from time to time, and it was not yet certain that the fire had died down completely everywhere.—Reuter.

Police Clash With Koreans

Another 200 police who went to a Korean school in the town were met by 300 Koreans. After a pitched battle police arrested eight Koreans. Three policemen were injured.

A few hours later about 600 Koreans gathered in the school, marched to the police station and encircled it.—Associated Press.

Filipino Senator Warns Against Resurgent Japan

Manila, May 11.

If the fears expressed by the foremost opposition foreign policy expert, Senator Claro M. Recto, are correct, the Philippines may well resign herself to being gobbled up anew by a resurgent, militaristic Japan.

It was Mr Recto who several days ago startled the nation with the announcement that the Mutual Defence Pact between the Philippines and the United States does not provide for America coming to the defence of the Philippines in the case of aggression by non-Communist nations.

Italy's Shipping Revival

Palermo, May 11. The Italian Minister of Merchant Marine, Paolo Cappa, said here today Italy will soon have rebuilt her merchant fleet, of which nine-tonnes was lost in the war.

He was speaking at the launching of the 12,500-ton vessel "Sicilia", which will ply between Genoa and the Italian mainland.

Premier Alcide De Gasperi attended the ceremony.

Signor Cappa said the Italian merchant navy now totals 3,350,000 tons against the pre-war total of 3,500,000 tons.—Reuter.

Alexander Mission To Paris

Paris, May 11. British support for the six-nation European Army will be reviewed on Monday when the British Defence Minister arrives here for important talks with his French opposite number.

Field Marshal Earl Alexander will be in almost constant session with the French Defence Minister, officials said.

The European Army pact, which was approved by a conference of experts on Friday, will link the armies of Germany, Italy, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg when it is ratified by all Parliaments.

Britain said she could not be formally tied to the continental defence community but would give useful aid and support.

The British Foreign Secretary, Mr Anthony Eden, agreed that matters of instruction, administration and supply would be handled in connection with the European Army.

These matters will be discussed by Lord Alexander, as well as possibilities of training European Army troops—probably Germans—with the British forces in Germany, sources here said.—United Press.

Templer's Shake-Up Of Malaya Govt.

Kuala Lumpur, May 11. New key posts, including for the first time a director of intelligence, have been created as the High Commissioner, General Sir Gerald Templer, continues the reorganisation and streamlining of the Malayan Federation Government machinery.

The new Intelligence overall chief will co-ordinate the work of all intelligence agencies in the Federation.

Other appointments include those of seven Assistant Organisations and Methods Advisers from the United Kingdom Civil Service, whose task will consist of "streamlining" Government work.

There will also be a new Security Officer in the Defence Branch, who will examine and keep in constant review all aspects of security, especially the safeguarding of secret documents.

West Germany's Shipping

Hamburg, May 11. The West German merchant fleet on May 1 consisted of 735 units of a gross tonnage of 1,164,012, according to statistics published today by the Association of German Shipowners.

Comal ships on May 1 had a fleet of 910 units with a gross tonnage of 1,341,181.—France-Press.

Mr Recto, whose every word on foreign policy is taken as gospel truth by a majority of Filipinos, painted the picture of a Japanese monster devouring the Philippines with the consent of the United States.

He said, "The Japanese hold the balance of power in Asia and they know it."

"They play the Americans against the Russians, and not all the peace treaties and mutual defence agreements in the world can save us if the Japanese, as a price for continued support for the American cause, demand they be allowed to develop in the Philippines and other countries in the Pacific a satisfactory substitute for their lost empire in China, Formosa, Manchuria and Korea."

Mr Recto refused to believe that seven years' American occupation and billions of dollars poured into Japan had instilled in the Japanese people any knowledge of democracy.

TOKYO RIOTS

And he reinforced his argument by pointing to the May Day disorders in Japan, saying: "We are naive if we blame the riots against the Americans in Tokyo only upon the Communists. The latter merely rode on a gathering whirlwind rising from the heart of the Japanese people."

"What Japanese, taught to believe he is directly descended from the goddess Amaterasu Omikami, can forget and forgive defeat?"

After depicting the growing Frankenstein that was Japan, Senator Recto cut even deeper. He explained that the Mutual Defence Pact does not obligate the United States automatically to come to the defence of the Philippines in case of external aggression.

DEFENCE PACT

He pointed out that if and when the Philippines were attacked, the United States would decide how to meet the situation either through executive action or Congressional declaration or merely decide to send a note of protest against aggression.

He also added that the United States may terminate the defence pact within one year after notice to the Philippines.

Senator Recto explained that this was not the fault of the United States but of the Administration which he once termed as "mendicant."

No doubt Mr Recto's views were startling but are his fears of resurgent Japan not merely gobs in the closet? It seems only the future hold the answer and the Philippines will either live or die with subsequent world developments.—France-Press.

Police Have To Intervene

Karachi, May 11. The police intervened at the first session of the International Conference of Moslem Peoples today when a number of those present shouted that the President of the Conference, Khalid Al-Azzam, should also condemn American imperialism.

Red Cross Anniversary

PANAMA GOES TO THE POLLS

Panama City, May 11. Panama went to the polls today to elect a President, two Vice-Presidents and 52 Deputies to the National Assembly.

The election came just a year after Panama changed its President amidst bloody riots, in which 12 people were killed.

Those arrested at that time included the deposed President, Arnulfo Arias, whose attempt to revert to an earlier Constitution for the State led the National Assembly to proclaim as President the former Vice-President Alcibades Arce-mena.

Arias was later released. The withdrawal from the elections of the Panamanian Party headed by Dr Arias left only two men contesting the Presidency.

Colonel Jose Antonio Remon, candidate of the National Patriotic Coalition, is a former commandant of the National Police. He is regarded as able to count on their entire support of the Government and the armed forces.

His opponent is Roberto Francisco Chirri, supported by a five-party coalition, the Civil Alliance, which favours civil rather than military government.

Supporters of the Panamanian Party, unable to vote for their own man, might, it was thought, switch their votes to Chirri and possibly secure his election.—Reuter.

An Unusual Portrait

London, May 11. Experts have told Mr George G. Hodgson, 48-year-old station-master at Long Marton, Westmorland, that they believe he is the owner of a Rembrandt painting.

Mr Hodgson said: "I don't know how much the painting is worth, and I don't care. It is one of those things on which you can't put a price."

The picture, which measures 14 in. by 7 in., is a portrait of Christ which except for the shoulder-length hair, is similar in treatment to the face in Leonardo da Vinci's "crucifixion."

Mossadegh Planning Hague Trip

Tehran, May 11. An Iranian Government spokesman said at a Press conference today that if Dr Mohammed Mossadegh was invested as Premier by the new Parliament, he would travel to The Hague on May 26 at the latest.

Dr Mossadegh would go to The Hague for the hearing of the British-Iranian oil dispute. The spokesman said that if Dr Mossadegh retained the premiership, important economic and financial plans would be submitted to Parliament.

Civil servants would be encouraged to leave their jobs to undertake productive work in agriculture or industry.

The spokesman also said that the Iranian Government would take all the necessary steps to safeguard Iran's rights over the Bahrain archipelago.

He concluded by saying that Iran's position in the oil dispute was clear and would not be modified by negotiations at present taking place in Saudi Arabia.—France-Press.

ECONOMIC SURVEY OF WORLD

Rearmament's Effects Minimised

New York, May 11. The United Nations annual economic survey, issued tonight, showed that the global rearmament race has failed to hit civilian economy with the impact many leading economists feared a year ago.

On the contrary, the voluminous report showed that the production of civilian goods has actually increased, wages generally have kept pace with prices and raw materials have continued to be available both for military and civilian requirements.

It said, however, that the cold war has widened the economic separations of the Communist and non-Communist worlds at accelerated speed, despite all efforts to improve East-West trade.

The report, prepared by United Nations economists for the Economic and Social Council which meets in New York on May 20, also said that the dollar shortage in many countries has begun to be serious again because of heavy American exports and the cut in non-military economic aid from the U.S.

World consumption of food per person was less than 15 years ago and the gap between the production of the developed countries and the backward areas widened still further. Associated Press.

Warning To New York

New York, May 11. The City Civil Defense Director, Mr. Arthur Wallander, warned today that it is now possible to destroy almost all the city of New York in a single air attack.

Mr. Wallander said that planes alone could do the job by dropping a string of a dozen small atomic bombs in a run from the Bronx in the north to the Battery in the south at the tip of Manhattan Island.

This danger, he said, arises from development of new missiles that are smaller than the original atomic bombs but pack the same blast.

But Mr. Wallander, in a report to Mayor Vincent Impellitteri, sounded a note of relative optimism saying that new detection and warning methods against enemy attack have kept pace with weapons improvements. Associated Press.

US Military Leaders' Analysis Of Red Strategy Not Planning Attack

Washington, May 11.

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives today published a report on the Foreign Aid Programme in which it was stated "The best judgment of U.S. military leaders and diplomats is that the Soviets have not set a date for an attack on the West."

The report, which followed a hearing by the Committee of 43 high-ranking military and civil officials, added that the Kremlin would only attack if it believed that a war would be to its advantage.

The report stated that the menace of Russian aggression was not diminished to such an extent as to justify any modification or relaxation of the military effort of the United States.

The report maintained that important Soviet forces were on a wartime footing in Eastern Germany and elsewhere.

According to the report, the morale of Europe had considerably increased, though no one could tell with certainty whether the European peoples would efficiently reply to a Soviet attack.

The will of the European people to resist appeared to be rapidly increasing in relation with the development of their means of resistance.

The report pointed out that a very real danger of military aggression existed in the Near East but added that the uninterrupted reinforcement of the military strength of the free nations was the best means of preventing a Soviet attack.

The report said a continuation of military aid in the Far East was necessary to protect French Indo-China, the loss of which would seriously menace the liberty of the rest of the South East Asian continent.

SURPLUS ARMAMENT

After submitting these conclusions the report did not explain how the Foreign Affairs Committee decided to allocate by $1,010,000,000 the $7,000,000,000 appropriations asked by President Truman for the military and economic aid of foreign countries during the fiscal year 1952-1953.

The report, however, pointed out that the law, after having been reviewed by the Committee, allowed $4,500,000,000 for military aid, the largest part of which would be used to supply the following categories: 1,275 aircraft, more than 6,000 tanks and military vehicles and more than 6,000 ground and naval artillery pieces.

To these allocations would be added credits still available from last year which included $326,000,000 worth of American arms declared to be surplus.

The report suggested to the House that the Defense Department should give American surplus $1,000,000,000 worth of arms coming from this stock if the credits already mentioned should prove to be inadequate.

The Foreign Aid Law will come up for discussion before the two Houses this week. Franco-Press.

REPUBLICAN INDIA'S BIG WEEK

New Delhi, May 11.

India is today preparing for the biggest week in her constitutional history. The next few days will see the installation of the first fully elected President, the inauguration of the first democratically chosen Parliament and the swearing in of the first government in India based on full adult franchise.

With a pageantry equal to that of Viceroyal days, the ceremonies will start on Tuesday with the swearing in of Dr. Rajendra Prasad as President of the Indian Union.

The President will drive in an open carriage flanked by a scarlet-coated bodyguard from his residence to Parliament to take the oath.

A 31-gun salute will be fired to mark his assumption of office.

India's first Vice-President, philosopher-diplomat Dr. Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan, former Ambassador in Moscow, will then be sworn in, becoming automatically Chairman of the Upper House or Council of States.

On the same day members of both Houses of Parliament will meet in the House of the People and the Council of States will be sworn in.

The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, will present the resignation of his Cabinet and will form a new Government. Reuter.

20 Tons Of Hot Bricks Bury Four

London, May 11.

Six men held up a crumbling wall for 15 minutes while colleagues worked to free four brickworkers trapped under 20 tons of hot bricks in a kiln.

The rescuers pulled away the hot bricks with their bare hands. They worked in intense heat. Only when their comrades had been released did they go to have their blistered hands treated.

The four who were trapped were repairing the roof of a chamber at Oxbott Brickworks, Surrey, when the arches swayed and collapsed.

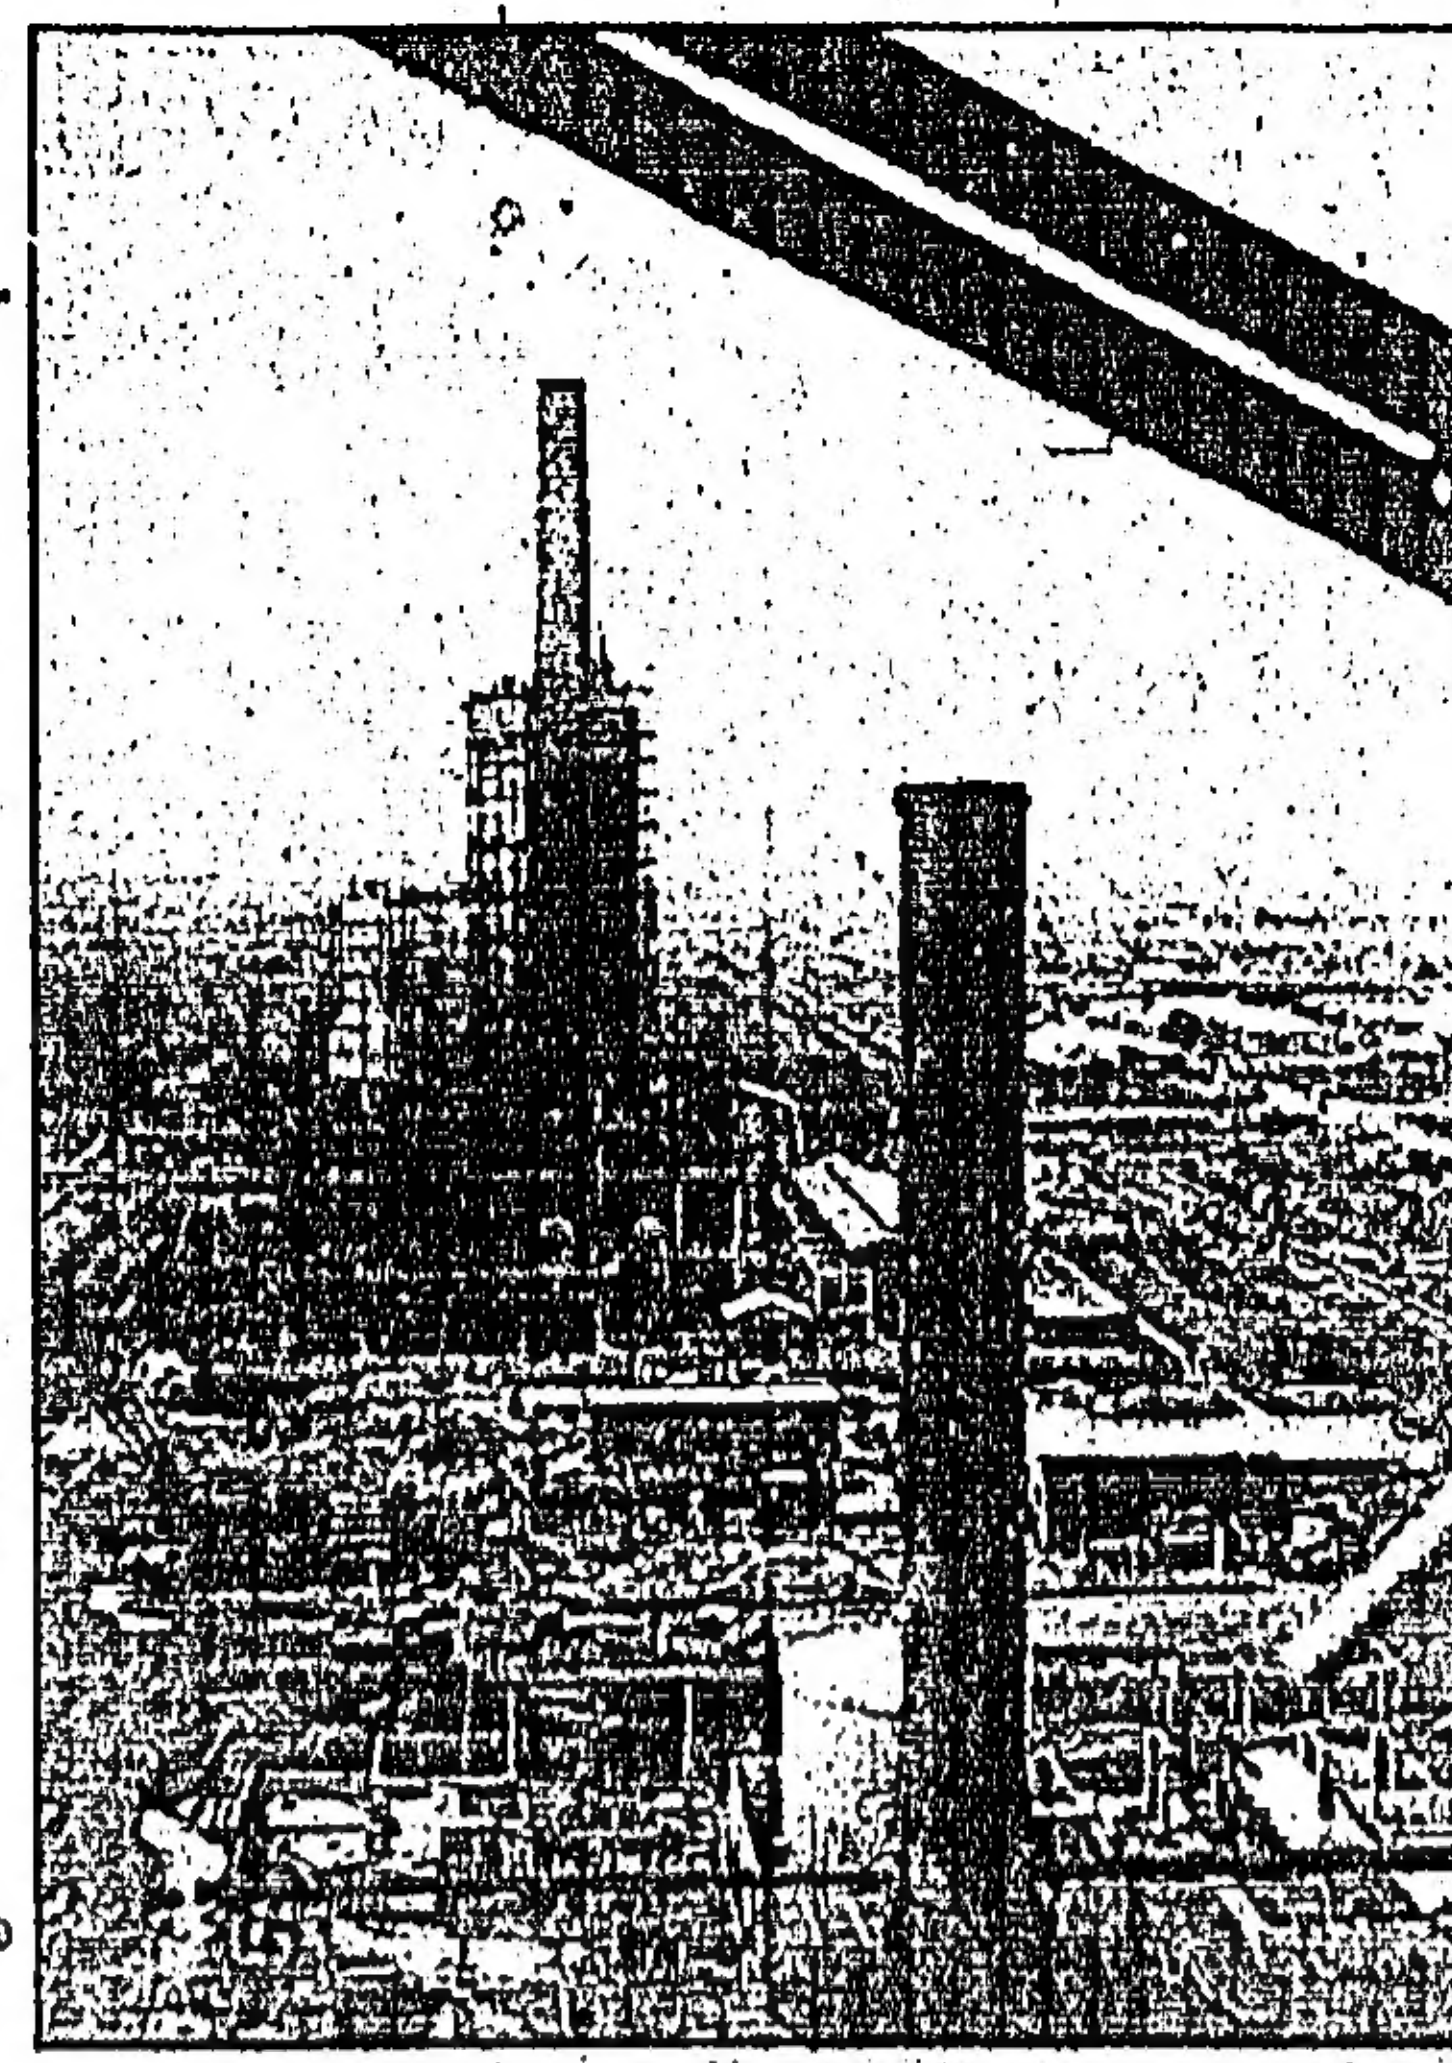

They fell 20 ft. and were covered with 7,000 hot bricks and five tons of clay ballast.

Mr. Peter Mills, the owner's son and manager of the works, organized a rescue team and sent for doctors. But there was danger from the wall of the next kiln.

It was then that six of the strongest men, wearing singlets and trousers, volunteered to hold it up and put their backs to the 3 ft. thick, two-ton wall. They stood the terrific strain until the trapped men were got out.

The four men, all badly burned, were Robert Crossland, Thomas Joseph Archer, Kingston Arthur Brown, Wembley and Herbert Selby, Malden.

American Warnings To Israelis And Arabs

Washington, May 11.

The House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee today warned the Arab States and Israel that the United States does not intend to go on indefinitely giving help for refugees and immigrants in that area.

The committee called on both sides to show constructive accomplishments this year.

The warning was contained in the committee's report on the foreign aid bill in which the group recommended appropriations of $85,000,000 in aid for Arab refugees, and $70,000,000 for Israeli immigrants during the 1953 fiscal year.

The report said the $85,000,000 appropriation for Arab refugees would be part of the total budget for United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees.

This agency is seeking to reintegrate 50,000 Arab refugee families from Palestine into the Near East economy.

Of the $70,000,000 recommended for Israel, the committee declared, 70 per cent would be used for the relief and resettlement of Jewish immigrants.

The remaining 30 per cent would be for expanding and increasing the efficiency of industrial and agricultural facilities, power production and transport.

NOT COMMITTED

To the Arab States involved in the problem, the committee issued this warning:

"The United States is not committed to permanent continuation of relief in this area. Negotiations with States in this area have reached the point where the United States has reason to expect a convincing concentration of constructive accomplishments this year."

To Israel it said: "The $70,000,000 carried in this bill should do much to contribute to the alleviation of Israel's distress."

Reds' War Of Nerves In Berlin

MAYOR SUMS UP SITUATION

Berlin, May 11. Mayor Ernst Reuter, today urged caution against taking threats from the East too seriously in a speech here on the eve of the third anniversary marking the end of the 1948-1949 Berlin blockade.

"People who open their mouths as wide as mine are strong as they seem—they must threaten and bluff for others who remain in the background," he said in a radio address.

"They are trying to tremble on the nerves of the West Berliners, but our nerves remain strong."

The West Berlin newspaper Der Tag recalled that the first Berlin blockade began with Soviet "pin pricks" of the type now being experienced. "It is as well the Allies should remember that the first big schism occurred after such small incidents as the turning back of Allied patrol cars," it wrote.

(Armed Soviet guards today barred the way when United States and British military police patrols tried to leave Berlin for duty on the autobahn to West Germany. They first interfered with patrols last Thursday.) Reuter.

BERLIN ARRESTS

Berlin, May 11. West Berlin police today arrested six youths, including one from East Germany, after breaking up an illegal meeting of about 60 members of the Communist Youth movement Free German Youth.

The Free German Youth is banned in West Germany but not in East Berlin.

Police said the six were arrested when they refused to heed police instructions to break up the meeting, which was held in a railway goods station in the United States sector of Schoeneberg. Reuter.

Jap Assurance To Australia

Canberra, May 11. The Australian Commerce Minister, Mr. John McEwen, today welcomed the Japanese Government's assurance that Japanese pearl fishers will wait for a formal agreement between the two countries before venturing into Australian waters.

The Minister said Australia would take advantage of relevant clauses in the Japanese peace treaty to negotiate an agreement. Reuter.

PRISONERS' WAGES IN VOUCHERS

London, May 11. Britain's 24,000 men and women prisoners are now without money.

Instead of cash earnings they will have credits entered in a prison ledger in which purchases at the prison canteen will be debited.

The Prison Commissioners say they believe this will appreciably diminish risks of trafficking, with its consequent temptations to staff and the possibility of blackmailing and bullying among prisoners and danger to prison discipline generally.

Criminals described in a recent official report as "prison barons" are known to operate tobacco and gambling rackets which net them considerable sums.

A member of the Prison Officers' Association said: "We know of places where these prisoners bet on horses and football pools for quite large sums. Other prisoners get into debt to them and sometimes commit offences to get away from them."

All prisoners with cash earnings in their possession will be required to exchange the money for credits. The new order will not apply to Borstals.

The new equipment, already installed in President Truman's transport aircraft, will be mass-produced for commercial aircraft by the Radio Corporation of America, the Bendix Aviation Corporation and the Dumont Laboratories under the control of Navy technicians. Franco-Press.

PART TWO OF CYRIL RAY'S UNCENSORED STORY

Soviet Union Is A Tangle Of Paradoxes

WHEN I left Moscow there was mimosa on sale in the streets of the still snow-bound city—blown up from the sunny Black Sea coast. What could be more enterprising, or more luxury-loving?

And yet the train by which I reached Leningrad on my way home, the Red Arrow, crack sleeping-car flyer of the Soviet Union, takes more than 12 hours for the non-stop 400-mile journey and provides no food for its passengers—not even in the "continental" car in which foreign ambassadors and important Soviet officials travel.

A tangle

What could be more inefficient, or more austere?

The Soviet Union is a tangle of such paradoxes.

The country that will lay on state-owned aircraft to fly spring flowers from the latitude of Constantinople to that of Glasgow hasn't yet got around to having petrol-stations on its main trunk roads.

Lorries doing the long haul from Kiev to Moscow, carrying food for the capital and raw materials for its great factories, have to waste most of their carrying capacity on their own petrol.

And it is only the other day that a brilliant Soviet citizen put up the brilliant new idea that the lorry might go back loaded with goods from Moscow to Kiev, instead of sending them back empty—with a new lot of loaded lorries being sent off the next day.

This is the country that makes the best jet fighter in the world and that is probably the best tank in the world—and which needed my W.C. cistern pretty well every week for a year with a piece of string and a rusty nail.

Whatever one's prejudices about the Soviet regime and the Russian people, for or against, there are incontrovertible facts to be found in Moscow to prove them to the hilt.

And if you try to have no prejudices at all, all you can do is to point with one hand to the MIG fighter and with the other to the rusty nail and ask your readers to draw their own conclusions.

What is important, though, is this—that this is the first time for 18 months that I've been able to tell you about the snail-like progress of the Red Arrow, or the long-drawn out saga of my cistern.

Censorship

EVERYBODY knows that the Soviet Union obstructs the entry of Western journalists (it took four years for me to get a visa) and imposes the most rigid censorship on what they write when they get there.

What isn't so well-known—because it is so nonsensical to Western eyes—is that the censorship doesn't concern itself simply with considerations of national security, as our own wartime censorship did. It cuts out anything, however meticulously accurate and even if it is a direct quotation from the Soviet Press, that could even remotely be construed as a reflection on the Russian people or the Soviet way of life.

I have had cut out from my stories from Moscow the fact that there is no map of the underground railway system; that you aren't allowed to use opera glasses in the Press gallery of the hall of the Supreme Soviet; and that a policeman moved us on when we peeped by the side of the road on the way to visit Tchaikovsky's old home.

Held back

AND, of course, such trifles as the average scheduled speed of the Red Arrow.

Any issue on which the regime hasn't made up its mind is taboo.

An American colleague of mine has been trying for four years to get a story to his paper on the interesting and quite innocuous controversy that has been going on all that time in the Moscow papers about the respective advantages of co-education and the separate education of boys and girls.

AND the six stories he wrote about the wonderful collection of Picasso's that is closed to the Russian public—because, Picasso, though a partisan, isn't to be admired or copied by Soviet painters—those six stories are still in the censor's drawer.

There is another sort of censorship, too, besides the cutting or holding of Press cables—the censorship that lies in not letting journalists see or inquire for themselves.

Double-chin slimming

Hints from an enthusiastic man—whose enthusiasm sometimes leads him astray

THE world cannot yet do without popular preachers. The old-style evangelists no longer draw great crowds, at any rate in Britain, but there are many to take their place. Mr. Gaylord Hauser is one of them. He preaches diet, and he has an enormous following, particularly in the United States. In his book "Diet Does It" (Faber, 15s.), he hammers away all the time at his main thesis: "What you eat determines your health and well-being." He generously throws in some excellent recipes on nearly every other page.

The theory that eating makes you healthy is an attractive one. It should appeal particularly to the Russians, who do their best to discount the "influence" of heredity in shaping the growth of both plants and animals. But if it was all as easy as Mr. Hauser makes it out to be, disease could be almost entirely banished by diet and doctors would be in clover, or in the bankruptcy court. It simply is not true that "any person alive, provided his bone structure is normal, can have a trim, vital body if he is willing to work for it." The most prolonged dietary struggle will never put right the body crippled by nervous and other diseases. In other matters also Mr. Hauser's enthusiasm leads him astray. For instance, he implies that diabetes has increased because the milling of grains has removed vitamin B from our diet. There is no evidence for this.

Again, he writes that "tuberculosis has long been known to be the result of malnutrition." Tuberculosis, as every well-informed person should know, is caused by infection with a germ, the tubercle bacillus. If it isn't infected malnourished people our sanatoria would be nearly empty instead of crowded to capacity.

There is one other point on which Mr. Hauser's enthusiasm would quarrel with Mr. Hauser. He talks about the vitamins that change grey hair back to its normal colour. In medical practice the results obtained with these vitamins have been most disappointing, and grey-haired readers of Diet Does It should not let their hopes be raised too high.

Mr. Hauser is at his best when addressing those members of his audience for whom he can do most—the middle-aged man who cuts too much and the woman of around 50 who is beginning to get seriously worried about her appearance—the woman, as Mr. Hauser writes, "who has had a long and candid look at herself in the mirror and seen that she is a bit too heavy, her double chin an ugly actuality." This "shadow of the tortoise" hangs darker over Hollywood than anywhere else, and some of Mr. Hauser's most successful campaigns have been among the film stars.

I could not visit any institution or talk to any official without the permission of the Press Department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

No answer

NOT only was permission never forthcoming: letters were never answered.

Letters never are, if an official cannot escape acknowledging a letter, or granting a request, he will telephone. "Never put it in writing" is one of the great bureaucratic watchwords. But if YOU try to telephone HIM, he is always out.

Out of 24 formal requests to visit such harmless interesting places as a kindergarten, a collective farm, and the ballet school at the famous Bolshoi Theatre, I was granted one (by telephone) — a visit to the Kremlin Museum.

Why? Don't ask me; ask the Politburo.

IT WAS very rarely that I was followed in the streets of Moscow, and then only when I happened to be in the company of diplomats.

I was free to go in and out of my hotel, and to visit any theatre, cinema, shop or restaurant without interference of any kind.

But I had to make formal application in writing if I wanted to travel more than 25 miles or so from Moscow, surrendering my passport and foreign resident's permit for endorsement.

If I was visiting some near-by place to which I was allowed to travel by road then I had to give the number of my car and the time and date on which I proposed to travel.

The middle-aged man or woman who has plenty of money to spend on food, and who lives in a country where rich food is plentiful, is in a desperate situation. Every day they are tempted to eat more than is good for them, and every day they succumb.

Mr. Hauser sets to work by telling them that the smaller their waist-line the longer their life line, and proceeds to stuff them with health-giving foods and vitamins which have plenty of bulk, but little fat and starch.

But he spoils things for some readers by insisting that yoghurt, black molasses, and brewers' yeast should be taken at every opportunity to fill up empty corners. As a preventative for pyorrhoea he recommends, among other things, a quart of yoghurt daily; some would much prefer to have pyorrhoea, though it is only fair to add that Mr. Hauser's teaching has apparently caught on, for a bottle of yoghurt seems to be a popular lunch nowadays for students and business girls.

Every housewife can learn something of value from Mr. Hauser's practical tips about how to prepare health-giving meals—the use of iodine salt is an example—but not every housewife will be able to obey all his instructions.

Not only are many of the foods he recommends either very expensive or unobtainable in Britain, but, in his view, the housewife must become a kind of laboratory technician when she is in the kitchen, which, of course, must be equipped with such items of culinary machinery as refrigerators, electric mixers, slicers, shredders, and juice extractors.

But Mr. Hauser would shrug away such objections as these, and in a way he would be quite right. For if we want to live longer and healthier lives we shall have to pay more attention to what we eat.

Mr. Hauser, addressing the housewife, writes: "The health of your family is in direct proportion to the soundness of your cooking methods." This is quite consistent with the school of medical thought which holds that a good cookery book does as much for the public health as a textbook of medicine.

Children are the same the world over and this picture shows a little girl selecting balloons and rubber balls from a street trader in Moscow.

The police on the road were warned to expect me and they telephoned from post to post to see that I kept moving.

If I failed to pass a police-post within the appropriate time, then a policeman would come to look for me and to move me on — as I discovered when I tried to eat a picnic lunch one summer's afternoon that I was visiting Tchaikovsky's old home.

Incompetence

ONE of the infuriating things — one of the very many infuriating things — was that it took a fortnight or so to get your documents back after your return to Moscow.

For they had to be surrendered and endorsed all over again when you got back. And yet you had to be able to produce those same documents at any time on demand.

I'm afraid I can't sensationalise my Moscow arrest — it was more funny than frightening, and it wasted the time of at least half a dozen Russians to that of only one Englishman. And it was an object-lesson not in bloodthirsty Soviet tyranny but in age-old Russian incompetence.

I was on my way to a party at an American colleague's flat and had been dropped by my taxi not only in the wrong street but in the wrong part of the city.

This though I knew the address parrot-fashion and also had it written out in Russian characters. But how could the taxi-driver be expected to know his way about?

There are no street-plans of Moscow, any more than there is a map of the underground railway system, or a telephone directory—the Soviet Union is too security-minded to allow such dangerous documents to be printed.

So my taxi-driver drove off, and I realised, as his tail-light disappeared, that this wasn't the right street—and that I was lost in a strange city.

Poor simple soul that I was in those days, I asked a policeman — and the policeman's answer was to hold out his hand and say, "Dokument!"

And my documents were duly being ordered by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Kept four hours

THE policeman promptly whisked up a comrade, and I was escorted to the nearest police station and for some four hours they sent for senior police-officers and plain clothes interrogators.

But it never occurred to them to send for one who spoke English or French, though I had been able to explain that I was English and could speak French. I was not allowed to use the telephone—which would have not only saved my time but theirs, as a Russian-speaking friend would have cleared up the trouble in five minutes; and it was a couple of hours before they would telephone the number I gave them—of a Russian friend.

It was another hour or so before they rang up my hotel, as I'd been asking from the first, and they began to get a glimmering of a notion that I was what I claimed to be—a newly-arrived and properly authenticated foreigner whose documents were in official hands.

Super-colossal Bath For Helen Of Troy

From NEWELL ROGERS

New York. beautiful girl or girls in bathtub. Cecil B. de Mille, who made a fortune out of screening beautiful girls in bathtubs, has told the tax collectors that they are no longer going to make a fortune out of him.

He has dissolved Cecil B. de Mille Productions. It is his personal corporation. Members of his family were the directors. Its chief asset was his contract to make pictures for Paramount.

The 71-year-old movie producer said: "Corporate income taxes, excess profit taxes, franchise taxes and other taxes don't leave enough capital to accomplish what the company was organized for."

But is de Mille quitting Hollywood? Not at all. How could he? Isn't he the man who started the place back in 1913 because it rained too much in Flagstaff, Arizona?

BARN FOR STUDIO

He stopped at Flagstaff, at the time just a cow pasture, rented half a barn for a studio, and made "The Squaw Man" for $15,248.

Today 69 pictures later, he has just made "The Greatest Show on Earth" for $4,000,000. In between his pictures have grossed nearly $800,000,000 more than any three other directors combined. He developed more stars than any other producer. His trade is making super-colossal. His trade-mark is a

STRICT TABOO

He tackled Bible stories when religion was a strict Hollywood taboo. If you are old enough, you remember "The Ten Commandments." It set box-office records in the twenties.

He followed this with "The King of Kings"—still being shown in churches. More recently there has been his modernised "Sign of the Cross" and "Samson and Delilah."

To him the secret of a successful film was so simple: "Love, boy meets girl. Conflict: hero versus villain. Everything else is just trimmings."

Finished with Hollywood? Said de Mille: "I've no intention of divorcing myself from a business to which I've devoted 50 years of my life." (He practically founded the movie industry in 1912 with Jess L. Lasky, a variety agent, and Samuel Goldwyn, a glove salesman.)

What next, then, young man? Helen of Troy, that's what's next. And Hollywood is betting that in de Mille's super-colossal Trojan war Helen will have a

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—Definitely a day for love and romance. All marriage matters are also highly favoured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—Don't waste time or money. Both have tremendous value. Use them wisely to promote your best interests.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—A new idea may prove the answer to your problem and bring about a significant advance toward a goal.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—Make use of what you have at hand just now. Extravagance at this time is not the best policy.

ACCORDING to a judge, political campaigns are educational. We learn that all flares are not fishermen and golfers.

Before marriage a girl is "dear"—after marriage, just plain expensive.

A California man shot himself because his wife wouldn't cook. We've heard it the other way, also.

Let nobody think that I approve the bidding or play of this hand. The South player happened to be far behind when this hand came along. In the 1945 Vanderbilt Tournament, his bidding was an attempt to get an unusually good result, so as to get back into the running. This attempt was spectacularly unsuccessful.

Samuel Stayman, holding the West cards, opened the king of clubs. When he partner, Howard Schenken, dropped the queen, Stayman continued with the ace of clubs. East discarded the deuce of hearts, and Stayman then shifted to the deuce of spades.

Declarer won his first trick with dummy's ace of spades and returned the ten of diamonds. Schenken covered with the king of diamonds, and declarer won his second trick with the ace of diamonds.

South next led a heart to dummy's ace, this winning his third trick. He returned the king of diamonds from dummy. Schenken covered with the jack, and South won his fourth trick with the queen of diamonds.

At this moment Schenken quietly showed the rest of his cards to South and mildly observed: "I think the rest are mine."

Declarer looked at Schenken's hand, glanced at his partner, and looked up his hand, conceding down seven. The loss of six points on this hand did not deprive South's chance to avoid humiliation from the tournament.

The unusual part about this big set is that a defender found himself in position to claim the last seven tricks, in the course of which he could draw the rest of declarer's trumps.

If South led the king of hearts, for example, Schenken could ruff with the five of diamonds, draw trumps with the seven and ace of diamonds, and then take the rest of the tricks with high spades.

Q—The bidding has been:

East South West North

Pass Pass Pass 1 Spade

Pass 7

Yours, South, hold: Spades 6-3-2, Hearts 4-7-3-4, Diamonds Q-8-5, Clubs 9-6-4. What do you do?

A—Pass. The chances are that your partner has a hand which is otherwise at least one of the opponents would have been able to bid. Nevertheless your partner has not opened with a forcing bid, so your hand should not be enough to produce a claim. There is no advantage in overbidding your own hand just because you know that your partner has strength.

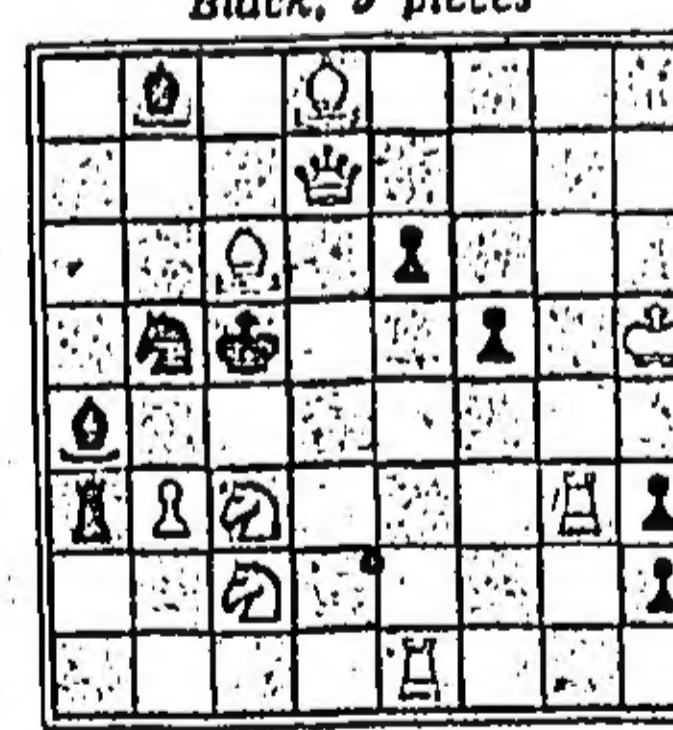

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding is the same as in the question just answered. You, South, hold: Spades 6-3-2, Hearts 4-7-3-4, Diamonds Q-8-5, Clubs 9-6-4. What do you do?

WOMANSENSE

Good Companions

By ALICE ALDEN

DID you ever see such a rich harvest of smart separates and mix and match makes as is to be had this season? With a wise eye and a sure knowledge of one's activities it is possible to do well by the wardrobe at a sweetly reasonable outlay. Katja of Sweden does a neat twosome, to go together or with other things. Lavender organza is used for the sleeveless blouse with tiny jet buttons below the demure collar. The coordinated skirt is cut on full, youthful lines, skirted and snugly fitted at the waistline, and is of purple cotton broadcloth.

Hair In The HOUSE—AND CHANGES

SOMEONE from Surbiton recently criticised the hairdos of Britain's women MPs. "They should attend to their hair and own attractiveness so that we might in fact believe they are women," he told the Guild of Hairdressers, Wig-makers and Perfumers.

After visiting the House of Commons one can report his remarks are not justified.

Best coiffed of the lady members are Lady Tweedsmuir (shining pageboy style with centre parting accentuating attractive widow's peak) and Miss Patricia Hornsby-Smith (who wears her flaming copper hair Edwardian style).

Miss Florence Horsburgh has chosen the ideal style for grey hair and glasses, short, neat and softly curled, smarter choice than Miss Margaret Herbyson's, who combines glasses with a long bob.

New short cuts include—Dr Edith Summerskill and Miss Alice Bacon.

How times change

MONDAY washday tradition is dying fast. Richmond Council may protest about the lines of week-end washing in the courtyard of Bloom Court flats, Kew, but they can't change facts.

Today, when more than one in every three married women goes out to work, Sunday is no longer a day of rest. Many women have to do their main housework at week-ends, plus their washing and ironing.

The washing expert Barbara Best, talking about the changing habits of the weekly wash, says:

"Women in the South have changed more than in the industrial North." "Now week-end washing is fairly general."

More women in the North still boil their clothes and have greater pride in the whiteness of their wash.

The idea of the Monday wash came originally when people used to change their clothes once a week on Sundays.

Another fascinating revelation... husbands are beginning to be involved in washing activities. Washing machines and other gadgets have got them interested.

Punishment changes PUNISHMENTS for children have changed, too. Earning television was suggested as a hardship by Mr. John Watson, chairman of Tower Bridge juvenile court.

This idea amused a little group of old-time nursery governesses.

They remember the days of standing children in corners. Miss Goodwin, now 80, says: "If my charges were really naughty I used to restrict their pleasures and deprive them of their privileges. I always tried to make the punishment fit the crime."

Other punishments of 50 years ago... sending to Coventry or to bed early.

Present-day governesses agree with the no-television principle. Mrs. Constance Brough, believes in "stopping treats and pocket money" as a check to real naughtiness. Another London governess stops favourite hobbies, like riding and sailing for a few days. She still finds the old-fashioned lines effective.

Art for the kitchen GIRL who believes in brighter kitchens paints special pictures for them of exotic fruits, vegetables and fish.

"These days of tiny flats many people have dining recesses either in or off their kitchens and like them to look more furnished," says Mrs. Barbara Ringrose.

She decorates her own dining-kitchen in her three-roomed Chelsea maisonette with pictures of green and red cabbages, lobsters, oysters, scallops and seaweed and a study of onions and eggs.

BEAUTY FORMULA CALLS FOR A BALANCE

By HELEN FOLLETT

ARE you a drive-yourself woman? Do you feel your nerves are tied into knots and screaming at you? Do you get up in the morning with complexion pale, shadows under the eyes, feet lagging? Why treat yourself like that? You wouldn't make anybody else work as hard as you do.

The members of the medical profession are stressing the need of relaxation because many of their patients are suffering from tension, have no definite organic illness. Tension means sleepless nights, lack of appetite, and beauty hazards.

A Chance to Rest Movie stars understand the need of letting up, giving the energy motors a chance to rest. If there are moments during the shooting of a picture when the stars aren't required, they do a flop, pull themselves all together again. Appearance is a part of their trade and they can't afford to lose youthful bloom.

Health is more important than anything else. You can't have it without a balance of work, play and sleep. One should never cease to play, to have some sort of outdoor activity. When you feel that life is kicking you around, put on your evening-league boots, get out and hoof it.

Tuck in Tummy Pull up your backbone. Hoist up your chest. Tuck in your tummy. Make long, deep breaths, timing them with your steps. Circulation will speed up, your flesh will be glowing, your spirits too.

If you are too tired to even think of walking, lie down and let every muscle relax. Close your eyes, close the doors of your mind, never giving a thought to the tasks before you. Keep saying to yourself, "I will rest. I will relax." The practice will bring a state of self-hypnotism and perhaps you can catch forty winks. In that event you will get up refreshed, ready to tackle whatever chores are on the calendar.

Daytime Choice

Improved production techniques have given new impetus to spun rayon, which this summer is going to have quite a run. This one is in navy, with a linen look, and is geared to see its wearer neatly through the day. Over-sized white scalloping around the collar and down the front flanks the big white buttons and makes for the neat, white theme which is so good in summer. The dress (below) is beautifully cut and shaped to slim the figure.

Pixie McGit Goes A-Diggin'

—It's Winter, But He's A-Huntin' for Spuddies!—

By MAX TRELL

"T'S just about this time of the year—I mean, the middle of the winter—when I really begin to get busy!"

It was Pixie McGit whom Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned about eyes, found in the middle of the meadow, his coat buttoned up to his ears and his muffled tied under his chin. A terrible cold wind was blowing. But Pixie McGit was digging holes in the snow with a sharp-pointed shovel.

"This ain't—er, isn't—a bit easy," and the chances are I won't find what I'm a-lookin' for. But I'm a-lookin' and a-diggin' and a-huntin' just the same. Just got to do it," he said as he stooped down and felt around with his hand at the bottom of the hole he had just dug. "No...nothin' in it. That's the way it goes," he said, standing up again and starting to dig another hole a few feet off.

Quite Curious

"What are you looking for, Pixie McGit?" Hanid asked, being by this time quite curious. "Spuddies," replied Pixie McGit, keeping right on with his work.

Hanid and Knarf both looked puzzled.

"Spuddies?" said Hanid. "What are spuddies?"

Pixie McGit leaned on his shovel handle, pushed back his hat and said in a tone of considerable surprise: "You've never eaten spuddies? I don't believe it. Baked spuddies? Fried spuddies? You're a-foplin'!" he said.

He clapped his hands together to get them warm. "Now I'll tell you why I'm a-lookin' and a-diggin' and a-huntin' for the spuddies in this particular field. It's because this used to be a spuddy field. It used to be filled with spuddies."

"But the farmer dug them all up last Autumn," Hanid said to Pixie McGit.

Pixie McGit now explained that his job with the pixie-family who lived in O'Cheer Hall down under the old Oak Tree was to get things to eat. "That's why they call me McGit," he said. "When something is needed for dinner I have to go out and dig it."

"Get dinner ruddy. I've found a spuddy!"

"It wasn't very good English, but it sounded too happy for anybody to complain. Knarf and Hanid felt good all over just hearing him."

"Oh dear," said Hanid, "it's such a small potato—and after all that work!"

"Better a small one than none at all," said Pixie McGit. And putting his shovel on his shoulder he hurried off with the potato across the field to O'Cheer Hall. Knarf and Hanid could hear him shouting as he ran:

"I've found a spuddy!"

"It wasn't very good English, but it sounded too happy for anybody to complain. Knarf and Hanid felt good all over just hearing him."

Pixie McGit darted off with the potato across the field.

"I don't know about that. He may have thought he dug 'em all up. But then again, maybe he didn't. Maybe he left some in the ground."

Suddenly Pixie McGit uttered a cry of joy. "Got one! Got one!" He was down on his knees, groping with his hands at the bottom of the hole. Then he jumped up holding a small potato. "There! There! You see! That comes from a-lookin' and a-diggin' and a-huntin' and a-hoplin'!"

"Oh dear," said Hanid, "it's such a small potato—and after all that work!"

Rupert and the Toy Scout—14

As the Scout flies away, Rupert and Willie run to join Podgy, who is sitting on the grass and looking very dazed. "What on earth is that plane?" he gasps. "It's flying like a rocket!" says Rupert. "And in it there's a Toy Scout who is working for Santa Claus!" While they stand and watch the tiny stranger, who can still be seen in the sky, Rupert tells Podgy how he and Willie first saw the mysterious tracks, and followed them to discover the hidden plane. "But I was following those tracks too," cries Podgy.

Let Rupert and Willie tell you the look of a really excited detective about Rupert's adventure. There are two exciting scenes in this book.

Emerald, topaz, and mauve patent leather is another Paris spring shoe fashion.

Nylon mesh makes the latest London shoe news. It is cool, it doesn't stretch, and it's much stronger than the old fabric mesh.

RECORD-SNATCHERS

These four King George V School girls decided that they did not want to share the 400 Metres Relay record with South China any longer and pulled out an effort of 13.52 seconds a leg for a new Colony record of 54.1 seconds.

They are Shirley Winterton and Hilary Hale (standing) and Deborah Hurlbatt and Jennifer Hart. Deborah (below left) also claimed the Colony Long Jump record yesterday with a leap of 15 feet 1 1/2 inches.—China Mail Photo.

AIRMEN SPRING A SURPRISE TO WIN QUADRANGULAR ATHLETIC MEETING

By "RECORDER"

The Royal Air Force crew of F/Lt. G.D. Noel-Johnson, F/O.G. Bowden and F/Sgt. K.E. Wake sprang a surprise on the local athletic world yesterday by turning out the best-arranged arena for a track and field meeting this season and then turning out a team to win the quadrangular meeting against Army, South China Athletic Association and the European YMCA at Kai Tak.

Four Colony records fell and the general standard was higher than it has been at any other athletic meeting this year, inclusive of the Colony Championships.

Gnr. E. Coburn established himself as the new distance running kingpin by slicing 10 seconds off the Colony 1,600 Metres record. Deborah Hurlbatt finally claimed the Ladies' Long Jump record, the King George V School girls clipped half a second off the 400 Metres Relay record they shared jointly with South China and the Royal Air Force produced a new Colony record in the 400 Metres Relay.

Final score in the match was 51 for the Royal Air Force, 50 for Army, 49 for South China Athletic Association and 20 for the European YMCA. The RAF four of Babjan, Howells, Perdue and Bogent, clinched the issue when they ran in ahead of the YMCA in the 1,600 Metres Relay, the concluding event of the programme and South China helped them by out-running Army.

AIRBORNE TRIUMPH

It was in the events that involved being airborne at some stage that the Airmen came through with flying colours. F/Sgt. K.E. Wake, the team's skipper, pole vaulted 10 feet 6 inches. F/O Charles and Cpl. Rinaldo finished one-two in the 400 Metres Hurdles and LAC Howells hopped and jumped all the way to 11 inches.

Though they did not mount their javelins, SAC Pritchard and SAC Small propelled them with sufficient skill to have them airborne longer than the rest of the competitors and ACIL Xavier and Sgt. Hamzah proved to be more jet-propelled than anyone else. The Airmen, in short, who were not conceded much of a chance against Army or South China, came through with flying colours for one of the biggest upsets of the season and thoroughly deserved their triumph.

Charles, Rinaldo, Babjan and Norris came through, when more established names failed to make the point score and Milburn, though he couldn't last the pace and finally collapsed, pushed Coburn to a new Colony record in the 1,600 Metres.

Howells' triple jump was the second longest in the Colony this year and makes the best test list for South China. The hockey star, L/Cpl. K. MacMahon, managed his best so far of 41 feet 10 inches, finishing third a half-inch short of the Colony record-holder, Chang Yat-hung. Shieh Ka-lim and Carpenter also cleared 40 feet.

STAR TURN

Deborah Hurlbatt's attack on the Colony Long Jump record attracted a record crowd despite the fact that the two relays were being run off at the same time and nine-year-olds were staking a month's ration of food lollipops on the result.

Four Belliss Public School girls had a grand time as the first four leapers in the event, the winner in this section of the competition being Shum Chung-nok with 11 feet 9 inches.

A great "Wah!" greeted the first big jump of the competition, Rita Hall's 15 feet 1 1/2 inches. The Rhodesian Record was the last to jump and her first leap, worth possibly several inches over 15 feet, was measured at 15 feet 1 1/2 inches. Deborah Hurlbatt had taken off for behind the board it was unbelievable.

Then came the second round and Jennifer Hart sailed into the lead with an effort of 14 feet 3 inches. Once more the Rhodesian established herself as an all-weather athlete, having first sprung into prominence on a bitterly cold February day, then run her fastest 100 Metres in a pelting rain and finally broke the record that had so long eluded her on one of the warmest days this year.

The standard in the throwing events was the highest this year and Cpl. Douglas finally pushed Chan Wal-chuen back into second place in the Shot Put and made his mark also as a discus thrower. Chan, retaliated by adding another 1 1/2 inches to his best Discus Throw.

George Thumb won the Long Jump with his best ever performance and another athlete showing considerable improvement was South China's Lau Kam-yiu in the Javelin Throw. Lt. Fortune cleared his highest in the High Jump—5 feet 6 inches.

Fees Vary For Rich And Poor

London, May 11.
A surgeon and a doctor agreed at Plymouth County Court that they based fees on the patient's social standing and his ability to pay.

But Mr Laurence Walrod Innes, who received £120 for two major operations and an examination, said he thought a charge of £42 by Dr Albert Stanley Bradlaw, for acting as his assistant at them, was "very excessive."

Judge P. L. E. Rawlings held that it was reasonable. He allowed Dr Bradlaw's full claim of £52 10s., with costs, against the executors of the estate of Mr Ernest Brock, a Plymouth business man and councillor, who died at 77, leaving £125,000.

In a cross-examination Dr Bradlaw had said a poor patient was charged a nominal fee or nothing at all, whereas someone who could pay was charged according to his presumed ability to pay.

Mr Innes agreed in principle with Dr Bradlaw, said Judge Rawlings, and he went on: "It is easy to say that it amounts to stinging the rich and providing for the poor at the expense of the rich. As a matter of fact, that is the way in other professions in which fees are calculated."

Dr Bradlaw, as Mr Brock's medical adviser for many years, was probably in a better position to judge the circumstances of the patient than was Mr Innes, who was called in as a specialist. "It may well be," the judge added, "that Mr Innes charged too little for the operation."

When Mr Arthur Goldberg (for the executors) said Mr Innes had charged fifty guineas for performing the first operation while Dr Bradlaw, who had no responsibility, charged 25 guineas for assisting, Judge Rawlings commented: "Junior counsel often gets two-thirds of the fee of a Queen's Counsel and does practically no work at all."

Mr Innes, a consultant surgeon in Plymouth since 1929, said it was the custom of most surgeons to pay assistants ten per cent of the fee.

NEED FOR DRIVERS' EYE TESTS

London.
Bad eyesight is one of the main contributory causes to road accidents. So say the Association of Optical Practitioners in criticising the present laws on tests for drivers.

Medical examinations in this country, they say, are not nearly so exacting as those in the United States, New Zealand or Australia. The Highway Code makes no specific mention of faulty eyesight as an obstacle to drivers.

Nor is any real emphasis apparent in the licence renewal form, which requires an applicant only to verify that he or she can see a number plate clearly at 25 yards. The Association consider that the standard required to pass this test is very low.

Spectacles may be worn to pass it, but there is no provision, they say, that the driver must wear glasses always.

A further point is that many people can, by screwing up their eyes or concentrating deeply, obtain good enough vision for a limited time—but one result of this is a tendency to fall asleep at the wheel.

The Association suggest that drivers in accidents should be required to furnish a comprehensive report on their eyes.

The Ministry of Transport say: "A requirement that some individuals should wear glasses while driving would be unenforceable." To this the Association's reply is that legislation should be brought in whereby eye tests should become a necessary part of the driving test.

ROAD TRANSPORT LEVY

White Paper Reveals Government Plan

Opposition Expressed By Trade Organisations

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

London, May 11. Road haulage in Britain, which was nationalised by the Labour Government in 1947, is to be handed back to private enterprise. This is the main proposal of the Government's plan for reorganisation of inland transport which was published in a White Paper at the end of last week.

Broadly speaking the Government's plan is to revert to the conditions prevailing before the Transport Act of 1947 when road and rail transport competed freely one with the other.

At the same time, however, it has proposed certain measures to protect the railways from loss of revenue when this competition is revived.

First stage in the Government plan will be to divide the Road Haulage Executives Undertaking, totalling 40,000 vehicles, into "operable units" which will then be offered for sale to the public by open tender.

The vehicles were originally acquired by the British Transport Commission at a cost of about £80 million, of which some £30 million was paid for the good-will.

But as that goodwill has, in the words of the White Paper, "substantially disappeared," it is thought unlikely that the undertaking can be sold at the price at which it was bought.

The Government therefore proposes that a levy, designed to yield initially £4 million a year, should be raised on all road transport—with the single exception of local delivery vans—to amortise the loss on the disposal of the undertaking over a period of years.

Part of the money raised by the levy will also be used to offset any loss of revenue suffered by the railways through the transfer of traffic to the roads.

MANAGEMENT SYSTEM—As far as the railways are concerned, the Government does not propose any change from the present system of public ownership. The proposed changes in this important section of the transport system are solely concerned with the method of administration.

One of the problems which the Government transport policy is designed to solve is that of "excessive centralisation." It proposes to do this by giving greater autonomy to area managers in all matters except those relating to finance and rail charges which will remain the responsibility of the Transport Commission.

INDIA IN LEAD—Before the war, Indonesia was the greatest exporter and India one of the smallest.

Today India has gained the lead and pepper is for that country an important source of dollars since the United States, with its vast canning industries, purchases about two-thirds of the world's exports.

India exports mainly black pepper whereas Indonesia was famous for both black and white pepper.

Today, the difference in the price between the two has become much smaller since it is now possible to turn black pepper into the white variety.

After India and Japan are among the largest producers of red pepper. Ginger products from West Africa and the West Indies are now not so much in demand since prices are so low as to discourage production. — France-Press.

Idle Session In Stocks

New York, May 10. Stocks idled through one of the duller Saturday sessions in years, with insignificant price changes and the lowest volume in 2 1/2 years.

Hesitancy pending the Supreme Court's steel seizure decision and the lure of Spring weather kept Wall Street attendance to a minimum.

Turnover was 340,000 shares, compared with 380,000 shares last week. Of 654 issues traded, 242 advanced, 204 declined and 208 were unchanged. There were 12 new highs and nine new lows. Some oils had sharp declines. Railroads were irregular. Motions slightly improved. Steels were fairly active.

Dow Jones averages at the end of the session stood as follows:

30 Industrials 244.50
 20 Rails 94.25
 10 Utilities 69.25
 40 Bonds 106.75

Price Increase In Britain

London, May 11. "The Economist" fortnightly index of wholesale prices, which is rather heavily weighted for food, closed at 233.5 on May 6, compared with 224.0 a fortnight ago and 228.1 a year ago.

It is 18.3 per cent above the pre-Korean war figure of 199.0. — United Press.

Demand For Gold Shares In London

London, May 11.

The markets have looked a bit silly this week.

On the strength of a brief lull in political tensions in South Africa, speculators went gaily into gold shares, hitherto conspicuously avoided.

Judging by the indices of closing prices, they lifted the market values of dividend-paying shares by more than five per cent and those of developing companies by no less than nine per cent. Unless the public comes in and supports them, their task seems substantial.

Largely on the strength of Mr. Churchill's broadcast last week, in which he told the country that he was determined to have the Conservatives stay in power for another three or four years, interest in gilt-edged developed but lasted only three days.

For the second batch of local elections showed, like the first, that the Labour Party is gaining heavily.

Old Consols ended the week at 80 compared with 81 1/2. The most active market was in Japanese bonds, where selling had been quiet and persistent.

The May Day riots in Tokyo touched it off but the effect of that was only transitory.

What seems to be influencing the market now is the belief that the Yoshida Government may be overthrown and replaced by another Government determined to resume trade with Red China and thus save the country's economy from collapse.

With no hue and cry whatever Tokyo Electric bonds have fallen from £170—their pre-May Day price—to £162. The 1007's fell from £163 to £133 and 1930's from £146 to £141.

Industrialists had a dull week. Although this is the season for all companies' dividends, copper lost ground and rubbers were weak. — United Press.

Palm Export Decrease

Washington, May 11.

The Department of Agriculture reported that Indonesian exports of palm oil and palm kernels during 1951 were 107,008 and 27,007 tons, respectively, a decrease of 10 per cent and four per cent from the 1950 figures.

Exports of palm oil to all destinations except Singapore and Malaya decreased in 1951, but the destination pattern of exports has changed in several respects.

The Netherlands continued to be the principal destination, with 69,007 tons. The United States became the second largest market, with 21,025 tons, against only 12,245 tons in 1950.

Exports to the United Kingdom and Germany have dropped about 50 per cent. — United Press.
